beaten and obliged to pay compensation to the outraged husbands. Sometimes, I heard, the lover, assisted by friends, resisted and a fight ensued, in which the husbands' party might also be reinforced by friends and relatives. In the end a third party would be brought in to arbitrate and fix the amount of compensation due, if adultery was satisfactorily proved.

In the case of a mag-pa wife, or a mag-pa husband, I have already mentioned above, in what I wrote on divorce proceedings, what the correct behaviour is in cases of the partners' infidelity.

As a rule, immorality is something that attempts are made to conceal, and scandals do not occur often because everyone always tries to hush them up. One of the chief difficulties that has to be faced, if such a case becomes known and has to be dealt with in the glare of public knowledge, is the problem of property. A guilty couple will have none to live on and, unless they can collect sufficient means to buy themselves at least a land tenancy, they will become beggars and be forced to live on grudging public charity.

The fate of illegitimate children is also a sad one. In most cases, hushing up the affair consists in considering a child born of an adulterous union as one of the family. Abortions are nevertheless often resorted to, and in the case of unmarried girls frequently practised. In Leh, Moslem barbers are those who perform these operations. Unwanted children begotten in this way are often done away with, too, by the mother simply giving birth to the child near the river, and throwing it into the water to drown. This is often the case with nuns in monasteries, who should be chaste in accordance with their vows. Most illegitimate children who live to be adult, become lamas or nuns. The principal reason for this is again that they have no property and cannot marry. In this way, they can live off the resources of the monastery.

5. Dissolution of marriage by death

If the eldest husband of a woman dies, the widow is automatically the official wife of the surviving eldest brother of the deceased, by inheritance. No marriage ceremony need be performed. If the woman does not like to live with this man and his younger brothers as she did during the lifetime of the eldest, but at the same time, does not like to leave the family household or to take yet another husband different from those she has had so far, or, again, if the surviving eldest brother does not wish to keep her as his wife, she is entitled in all these cases, to maintenance by the family. This takes the form of a piece of land called Shrub-zhing (sGrub-zhing?), that is a small field put aside to supply her with some modest means of subsistance.

The widow of a deceased eldest brother is otherwise at liberty to leave the house and family. But her choice must be made at once, at the death of her eldest husband; should she not avail herself of this opportunity, she remains the legal wife of the surviving brothers and she will lose her claim to separation, unless she formally divorces them later.

If a family of brothers, married in bag-ma, dies without issue, their unmarried eldest sister is entitled to the inheritance, if she continues to live on the family property. If she is married in bag-ma elsewhere, she can occasionally divorce in order to inherit the property. Otherwise, the next-of-kin who become the heirs are the father, the mother, the widow of the deceased (if she continues to reside in the family house), the eldest of agnates, the p'ha-spun, in that order of precedence.

Unless a widow inherits the property, she is only entitled to maintenance during her lifetime. She will receive To-zhing if she is an only or the eldest wife; if she is a second or other subsequent wife, she will only receive Shrub-zhing. If, on the other hand, a widow inherits the property, she is entitled like an eldest daughter, to take a mag-pa; she must, however, hand on the ancestral property complete at her death, to the heirs which she may have with her new husband, or to the next-of-kin of her late husband who are entitled to receive the succession.

If an eldest daughter, who has inherited the family property, dies without issue, her mag-pa is entitled to succeed to it, provided that he marries a relative of his deceased wife's family. If he, again, has no children, after his death his second wife will inherit the property if she survives him. If she does not, the relatives of his first wife will be the heirs. An heiress may make a gift of property to her mag-pa during her lifetime, to make sure of his possession in case of her death. Such a gift is perfectly legal, and often takes place.

Self-acquired property, as opposed to ancestral property, can always be made the object of a gift by a proprietor. He can also leave it by will to other heirs than his legal ones, despite the fact that he is not entitled to do this with family property. In some parts of Ladak (Tangtse), if a son is suffering from some incurable physical defect, a father is entitled to skip him and to arrange beforehand for some other heir to take his place.
